SECTION I

HEADQUARTERS TRAINING IN OPERATIONS

1. The operations courses conducted by the Headquarters Faculty of the Operations School in FY 1961 continued to be primarily of an advanced specialized type designed largely for personnel who have had basic clandestine operations training or the equivalent in field experience. The Counterintelligence Familiarization course and the Counterintelligence Operations course were completely revised to meet continuing demands for more advanced instruction. The Scientific and Technical Operations course was given intensive review and professional improvement, and is gaining stature and creating interest as it develops. The [REDACTED] course was recast radically and is now [REDACTED] course. The Liaison Operations course was revised to emphasize the operational techniques and methods of specific areas. [REDACTED] Seminar were developed and conducted in FY 1961.

2. As is indicated by the changes cited above, during the year the Operations School paid great attention to adjusting course content and instructional procedures in order to provide training that was most responsive to the requirements of the Clandestine Services. The courses offered were subjected to critical review by responsible Clandestine Services officials, and DD/P officers and OTR instructors devoted much time to joint development of improvements. The Operations School instructors continued their drive to obtain guidance, current doctrine and methods, and substantive background material from the Clandestine Services; there are indications that the flow of such support to OTR is increasing.

3. The DD/P continued to cooperate in providing well-qualified personnel for assignment to the Operations School for instructor duty. During the year the Inspector General's survey of training served to confirm a working agreement between OTR and the Clandestine Services with respect to providing OTR with instructional personnel; the DDCI approved the recommendation that "DTR adopt a three-year tour of duty as standard practice for instructors and schedule replacement at the rate of one-third of the instructor staff annually. (Primarily OS/TR)"

4. A listing of the regularly scheduled operations courses conducted at headquarters during the year is at the end of this section. In connection with instructor workloads, it should be noted that during the year 42

Agency staff employees who could not be entered in regularly scheduled courses, and [REDACTED] services, received 403 hours of tutorial instruction at headquarters.

5. It is planned that the program for more advanced training in the [REDACTED] through seminar sessions, will be expanded. Seminar sessions in propaganda, economic warfare, and scientific and technological operations are being developed. Research is now being conducted which will lead to regularly scheduled courses in interrogation, and in records management and control. An expansion of the Headquarters Faculty will be necessary in order to meet these new requirements.
